DEDICATED to . . .

In 1944 and 1945 we have been looking forward to that nebulous prospect, the Post-War Period. As a nation among nations, we have thought of collective security, of Dumbarton Oaks and Bretton Woods, and of full employment. As a state, we have discussed the surplus in the state treasury. As a College, we have made plans for new buildings and for expansion of curricula. As individuals, we have made plans, too, and most of those plans have included a home of our own and a family.

For, whatever sort of world we build in this Post-War Period, we know that family life must be the underlying basis of our democratic civilization. It is in the home that children receive their first ideas of being tolerant, of sharing, of loving and being loved. And it is in the home that parents can realize their highest ideals of cooperative living.

As our own little neighborhoods become bound together into a great world community, it is increasingly essential that our families expand their knowledge, their interest, and their experience to help themselves and their children to understand and appreciate the varied backgrounds, cultures, and problems of other members of this world neighborhood.

Because of the basic importance of the internationally-minded family in the Post-War World, the MONTAGE chooses to dedicate its 1945 edition to two families in our College community, each of whom could serve as an outstanding example for us to follow in building a family of world citizens.

One family, long one of the most popular groups on our campus, has come by its world consciousness through heritage. The other family, having become a vital part of our College life in the short time they have been among us, have cultivated their international interests through travel and study. Both are known for their many varied interests and for their success as family groups and as individuals.

The 1945 MONTAGE is therefore proud and honored to bestow its dedication upon the M. Ziolkowskis and the George A. Douglases.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Ziolkawski, and Johnny and Teddy.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Dauglas, and Johnny and Dannie.

WE, AS A COLLEGE, are looking forward to the coming years of peace, to the time when our administration can realize its program for capital improvements on the campus, when the faculty can expand the curriculum to meet the expanded needs of students who will shortly become citizens, not of the state and nation alone, but of the world.

We, as a College, are planning now so that the College may better fulfill its obligations to its students, to the state, the nation, and to the world in the Post-War Years.

COLLEGE

The GOVERNOR

In the Spring of 1945, as in the Spring of 1944, His Excellency Chauncey Sparks visited Alabama College and gave the students a live view of the man who too often is known merely as the Governor of Alabama and ex-officio chairman of Alabama College's Board of Trustees. The occasions for Governor Sparks' visit were the annual Citizenship Day program and banquet, at which he was speaker and honor guest.

By his presence as well as in his speeches, Alabama's chief executive has given Alabama's younger citizens a more personal contact and interest in Alabama's government.

ARTHUR FORT HARMAN

The PRESIDENT

With many years of experience in running a college during peacetime, Dr. Harman, Dean Napier, and Mr. Wills were well prepared to guide Alabama College through the difficult war years.

Calmly meeting each new difficulty, these three capable executives set a fine example to the students. New courses were added, adjustments were made simpler by their aid and advice, and life was kept as much on the normal level as could be expected in a time of turmoil such as the years through which we have been passing.

Always taking the long view, Dr. Harman has not only been making plans for campus improvements and new buildings for the post-war years, but he has also been instrumental in inviting to our campus this year speakers well able to give Alabama College students a glimpse into the problems and the difficulties and the opportunities that lie ahead of us in the years to come. These outstanding individuals have indeed made a lasting contribution to the lives of those who have sat in their audience.

Dr. Napier, universally admired, respected, and beloved as Dean of the College, has kept up with the ever-changing trends in college curricula and has worked with faculty committees and groups to make plans for post-war courses to interest returning servicewomen and their contemporaries. Finding the Dean always patient and understanding, students continually make their way to his office seeking advice on a variety of problems, personal as well as scholastic.

The man charged with the responsibility of balancing Alabama College's budget is Mr. E. H. Wills, College Business Manager. Too little known to the majority of the students, Mr. Wills is the closest administrative friend the student publications have. He is willing at any time to offer invaluable aid to the financially-befuddled managers, always interested in their problems, always capable of suggesting a solution.

Each performing his respective duties, this hard-working trio operates with dignity and understanding befitting their administrative positions to coordinate and execute the many activities of a college community.

DR. STECKEL, Student Counselor

MRS. McCOY, Dean of Residence

Although we have been told many times that classes are the basis of all college work, there is much behind-the-scene activity essential to life on the campus. The administration handles these details with efficiency and gusto.

ADMINISTRATIVE STAFF

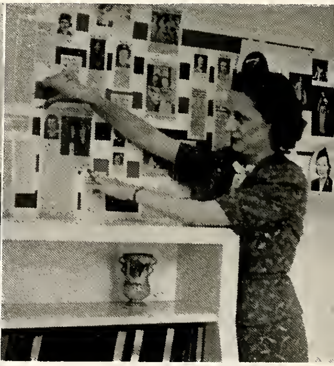
MISS HENDRICK, Registrar

Housed in Reynolds are . . . Mrs. Woods, the hostess, who not only performs all the functions of a hostess, but who manages to find flowers at all seasons of the year . . . Miss Fuller, vivacious Alumnae secretary . . . Miss Gachet, model of efficiency on vocational guidance . . . Miss Leeper, patriarch of the post office.

In Palmer . . . Mrs. Theda Wyatt Nordan, charming executive secretary, an alert publicist and an addition to any social function . . . Miss Lee, precise bursar who impresses unsartorial students with her ever-neat blouses . . . Miss Hendrick, registrar and chief keeper of the grades.

MISS LEE, Bursar

MRS. NORDAN, Executive Secretary



MISS FULLER, Alumnae Secretary

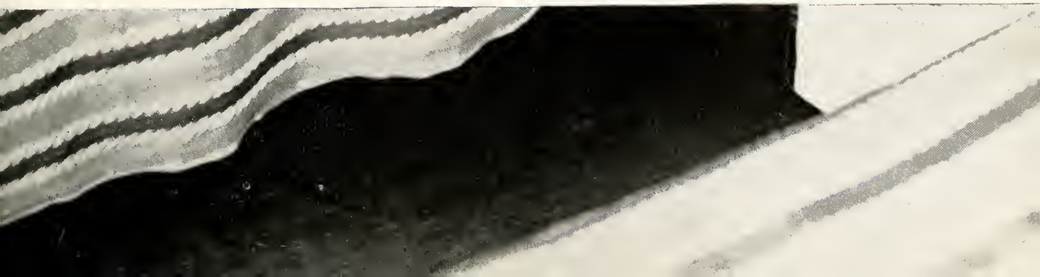
TUTWILER

WE, AS INDIVIDUALS, are planning for the future. We will be world citizens and, as such, will have to assume the added responsibilities, develop more universal attitudes, that world citizenship will demand.

We will need greater tolerance toward peoples whose ideas are not like ours . . . broader understanding of people whose lives do not reflect a background similar to ours and do not follow a pattern familiar to us . . . deeper faith in the goodness of God, of our fellowmen everywhere, and of ourselves.

We are today accepting the responsibilities of citizenship in our nation; we are voting, informing ourselves about others in our nation and throughout the world, and looking forward to the day when, through homes and families of our own, we shall give the world a new generation of socially-conscious world citizens.

CLASSES



AS WE, THE CLASS OF 1945 . . .

. . . accept the cap and gown of the college graduate, we must also accept a great responsibility—a responsibility to ourselves, to the communities of which we shall become a part, and to our world.

We are the educated, the trained, the cultured. To some of us will come the responsibility of guiding the thinking of school children; to others will come the privilege of influencing public opinion through radio and the press. What will our influence be?

What sort of a world will we make? If we, equipped to think, to guide, to lead, fail to accept the responsibilities of leadership, to whom can the world turn?

However insignificant we may feel in the tremendous happenings of the world in which we live, let us resolve that our influence in that world shall be worthy of that of a college graduate.

1945 finds the class of the same year smugly entrenched in its sacred and revered domicile Tutwiler, where the life of the honorable Seniors is a busy, as well as a distinguished, one. Finding themselves abruptly charged with the responsibility of holding all the major offices on the campus, of maintaining the excellence in scholarship of graduating classes before them, and of being held as imitable examples of young Southern womanhood for the underclassmen, they forthwith began to "dig in" and have, in general, met these challenges with admirable skill and poise.

1945 also finds the Seniors a bit reminiscent of such times, when as collegiate neophytes, they first became fully oriented into Alabama College and its many traditions, or when they slaved through those exhausting Sophomore standard exams, or when as Juniors they nominated "Handy Henrietta" for governor at Crook Convocation. Perhaps, too, they remember how eagerly they anticipated donning caps and gowns, moving to Tut, and being accorded Senior privileges only now to find—with their daily schedules entirely inadequate for their daily activities (academic and otherwise)—that the obvious advantages of Seniordom are not everything.

The JUNIOR CLASS

It was the Class of '46 who last year looked forward to being Juniors—moving to Hanson, launching into more specialized courses in their major fields, and taking on added responsibilities in the various extra-curricular activities in which they participated.

It was the Class of '46 who could hardly wait for the first week of school to snatch the Crook from its case in Tutwiler and transfer it to Hanson, where the Juniors waited breathlessly for a visit from the Seniors . . . who never came.

The same Class of '46 then settled down to the more serious activities of third-year college life, taking time out in the Fall to produce a mystery hit, "Ladies in Waiting," as their class play. By the time College Night plans began to stir, the Juniors had shown themselves capable of holding down responsible positions on both cabinets and of carrying out many of the varied and difficult jobs behind that all-student production.

When March brought thoughts of Spring elections to the fore, the Class of '46 suddenly realized that from its members must come the heads of all the major organizations, the publications editors, and eventually the College Night leaders of 1946. With this thought came the realization that their College days were rapidly approaching the last lap.

The SOPHOMORE CLASS

Enjoying to the fullest their new status as upperclassmen, the Sophomores were the most eager guides to the sufficiently inexperienced Freshmen who could indeed appreciate and profit by the advice readily contributed by the sufficiently experienced Sophomores.

Having impressed not only the Freshmen but the upperclassmen as well, the Sophomores immediately plunged into the job of staging a heavenly hop to the tune of "Stardust." In one of their off moments, they also put their personalities to work to sell more College Theater tickets than any other class on the campus. And as loyal College Thespians, they starred their class prexy in a record-breaking, side-splitting performance of "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court."

Although their members were quartered partly in Ramsey and partly in Main, the Sophomores have shown a singular unity of purpose in every undertaking in which they have engaged and have won for the Class of 1947 a reputation of outstanding dependability and ingenuity.

The FRESHMAN CLASS

The potential seniors of 1948 arrived at Alabama College in September, bag and baggage (the legendary "six Indian-head napkins" included) ready for most anything that was apt to come along, and that "anything" definitely came along in the form of various and sundry things. Orientation Week was first on the list with its extraordinary tests, its lectures, with its helpful upperclassmen dressed in white whom the greenhorns followed doggedly to and from all points on the campus, with its parties and, most assuredly, with its two pencils, well sharpened if you please.

After learning, among other things, the right approach down the fire escape, to eat continuously and still stay on one's feet, and to blaze a trail through the crowd to one's post office box, the freshmen progressed rapidly. They gave the student body a Hallowe'en party and presented the play, "Love in Livery." When Elite Night came along, the freshman class produced a beauty and three favorites. In the spring the Seniors were entertained by the freshmen at a theater party, and later the class of 1948 tripped the light fantastic, in the 1945 fashion, at their own dance.

And so the end of the term found the once-green freshmen now both educated and experienced and, again, ready for most anything that was apt to come along, namely, that Sophomore year.

MUSIC LISTENING—As part of their course in history of civilization, freshmen spend an hour each week listening to the world's great music.

WE, AS GROUPS, are informing each other and ourselves on some of the many phases of our contemporary world environment.

As members of clubs and honorary groups, we have centered our attention on the effects of war in our relative fields and the probable prospects in those fields for the Post-War period.

In classes, we have been encouraged not merely to read widely about war-time and post-war problems but to evaluate what we read as well, to form our own opinions, to learn to adjust our thinking to the changes which we know must come to all of us in the years that lie ahead.

PRESIDENTS' Council

COORDINATES STUDENT ORGANIZATIONS

OFFICERS

EVELYN WARD	President
CAROLYN IRWIN	Secretary
ANNIE LAURIE SIMS	Treasurer

Dropping in on a Presidents' Council meeting would afford one an opportunity to see a grand array of the heads of all student organizations, who meet as members of this body to plan the general course of campus activities.

Freshmen are introduced to the organization during orientation week when members of the Presidents' Council help guide them through the first strange paths of college life. The Council provides entertainment for new students by giving a picture show party for the Sis-Major-Minor group, by arranging assembly programs, and by conducting campus tours for both the students and visitors.

This year, in addition to regular duties of recording activity points and arranging meetings, the Presidents' Council has done its bit for the war effort by coordinating the sale of War Stamps and Bonds by the various campus organizations during the Fifth and Sixth War Loan drives.

Lillian Dodge presides over Student Body meeting.

STUDENT

The Student Government Association is the vigorous voice of student life at Alabama College. This year the Executive Board, composed of representatives from each class and the four house presidents, has worked with Lillian Dodge to make Student Government what the students want it to be.

From directing registration and conducting handbook drills to presiding over spring elections, the Association has played a dominant part in campus affairs. The reception given in Main Lobby for the freshmen in the Fall was its outstanding social function, while College Night was its chief undertaking in the Spring.

In its task of maintaining decorum on the campus and of enforcing Student Government regulations, this year's Executive Board has successfully endeavored to uphold the highest standards of conduct on the campus at a time when the stress and uncertainties of war might well tend to lower them.

As is the case with all student organizations, the first contributions of the Student Senate to the college year came as its contribution to the complicated Orientation program. Senators helped meet freshmen, then made life a little less confusing for them by acting as Group Chairmen to lead them to and from the many meetings which beginning students must attend.

In the interest of extending hospitality to young friends and of acquainting future students with our campus, Senators entertained around 150 high school students at various times during the college year. Because of travel restrictions, the Senate voted to discontinue its annual practice of entertaining a large number of high school students at a House Party and chose instead to endeavor to reach these students in some other manner.

The Senate, which is in charge of all flag displays on the campus, greatly improved the flag situation by replacing the well-worn College flag with a new one. The purple and gold flag of Alabama College flies over the campus on Sundays, while Senators are responsible for the raising and lowering of the United States flag during the week.

Between the high spots, the Senators, always ready to serve both campus and community, performed their regular duties of sending condolences to bereaved students or faculty members, of caring for all flags, and passing on student government regulations.

Center: Addie Lou Parris, chairman of the Public Service Committee, supervises the lowering of the flag by Lennie Sue Goree and Ruth Nichols.

The Y.

Mary Gene McMurphy, campus chairman of the World Student Service Fund Drive, had the assistance of Marian Shanley, of the national headquarters, in initiating the drive at A. C.

The Y. W. C. A., open to all students of Alabama College, begins its busy schedule of work in September by taking a large part in Orientation Week and continues its various projects throughout the year.

Some of the many varied activities sponsored by the Y include the Sis-Major-Sis-Minor program during Orientation, which introduces freshmen to upperclassmen; the Christmas party for the servants of the College; evening watch services in each dormitory every night; the Red Cross program on the campus; and the regular Sunday Vespers program.

The much-frequented Tea House is also one of the Y's continual interests.

Dr. Warner B. Hall, of Tuscaloosa, was brought by the Y. W. C. A. to the campus as guest speaker for the Y's annual Religious Emphasis Week. Judging from student response and enthusiasm, we can safely say that Dr. Hall was one of the most dynamic and thoroughly enjoyed speakers of the entire year.

Miss Marian Shanley, representing the World Student Service Fund, was on the campus to speak at the opening of the Alabama College drive for that organization. While on the campus, Miss Shanley was entertained by Y officers and by Mary Gene MacMurphy, who was student chairman of the Alabama College drive.

RECREATION ASSOCIATION

PLANS RECREATIONAL ACTIVITIES FOR STUDENTS

OFFICERS

CECILE AUCOIN	President	ANNETTE HIXON	Secretary
MAMIE LOU PIPKIN	Vice-President	RUTH GOLSON	Treasurer

Recreation, one of the first activities to which students on the campus in the Fall are introduced, is the chief interest and responsibility of the Recreation Association, the members of which are busy every minute of Orientation Week doing everything from taking care of baggage to planning a supper hike to camp.

A dance following Elite Night and a Christmas party were specific functions among the long list of entertainments the Association arranged, a list which included Sunday open house at the Field House, camp house activities, tournaments and intra-mural programs in varied sports.

More on the serious side of recreational responsibilities, the group sponsored the 1945 March of Dimes on the campus and participated in the sale of war stamps.

Acting in the capacity as supervisor of the financial affairs of the ALABAMIAN and the MONTAGE, the Publications Board concentrated its energies on preparing budgets for these worthwhile enterprises. All contracts entered into by the student publications were approved by the Board.

The contribution of this group to Orientation Week was the placing of legible signs in conspicuous places for the benefit of those who do not already know the names of campus buildings. For good measure, the girls also did their share of meeting and greeting new students in their traditional white dresses.

Finally, the Publications Board selects the editors and business managers of the two campus publications, the ALABAMIAN and the MONTAGE, from recommendations submitted by retiring staff heads.

Editor Quinn and Business Manager Perry can indeed smile over their best-yet ALABAMIANS.

The ALABAM

Every other Friday every mailbox at the P. O. is full . . . of the bi-monthly copies of the ALABAMIAN, Alabama College's four-page newspaper. This year, as never before, the ALABAMIAN has succeeded in capturing the attention and interest of Alabama College students.

Main force and guiding spirit of the ALABAMIAN this year was wide-awake, liberal-minded Carolyn Quinn, whose anything-but-status-quo attitude brought the newspaper up-to-date in its policies, editorials, and make-up.

Left: Reporter Grace Gamble turns in her copy . . . Right: Wednesday night finds Quinn and her associates, Gardien, Rawlinson and Hamilton, reading proof and making up the paper.

To start off with a clean page, Editor Quinn threw out the traditional type of the masthead, substituting more contemporary lettering. With her instruction and supervision, the make-up editors juggled that title all over the front page, giving a constantly varied appearance.

"Quinn" also encouraged the extensive inclusion of regular features and columns. The usually monotonous gossip bit appeared as the "Quidnunc's Missive," telling a wide variety of the latest in a sprightly fashion and without malice. Columns of cultural interest, were Laura Watson's "What's New?" and Franklee Gilbert's "See Here," . . . while Marion Dillon brought to light all sorts of intimate information about various "Campursonalities" whom she interviewed for her column of the same name.

Ann Johnson, circulation manager, and Sylvia Appleton, advertising manager, each handled essential behind-the-scene jobs.

IAN

The ordinary news story, club report, or concert write-up took on added reader interest, partly because of the editor's demand for real journalistic style and partly because of the eye-catching headlines coined by the alert head-writers.

Perhaps the greatest additional reader interest was attracted to the editorial comments of "Quinn" and her editorial associates. She fearlessly attacked the lack-a-daisical attitude of both faculty and students toward certain definite problems on the campus. Such an energetic editorial policy attracted many readers to the editorial columns, people who had previously been readers only in the gossip sense.

Feature writers Dillon and Gilbert, on hand as usual with their sparkling copy.

Comment must also be included on the subject of the humorous cartoons included on the editorial page, and reflecting student life at its most grotesque.

The business staff, headed by capable Dot Perry, kept the financial side of the publication in good balance while Ann Johnson and her assistants got the issues to students, parents, alumnae, and friends with record efficiency by keeping the publication's extensive mailing list in up-to-the-minute form.

Harrassed editor sits down to attempt an account of the frenzy of putting out a yearbook in wartime. The staggering problems, snowballing down from past years, cause the staff headaches, sleepless nights, gray hairs, and wrinkles of countless numbers.

For, during wartime, the task of organizing the book into pages divisible by four, eight, or sixteen (always a problem for a calculus class) was dwarfed by the more pressing problems of locating flashbulbs, meeting deadlines in spite of film shortages and delays in photographic work, and tracking down a cover.

Cooperation among the students at Alabama College and among the staff members made the editor's local problems a great deal lighter. Students, accustomed to taking their time in having class pictures made, rushed around to meet appointments that scheduled the entire student body for one week, and faculty members sympathetically ignored the snores of sleepy staff members after a long night's orgy in the MONTAGE Office. Ever-loyal staff members dug deep to make organizations officers divulge all pertinent facts, then blunted a million pencil-points rewriting and revising their write-ups.

From amateur to ace might be used to describe the progress of photograper Margaret Harrell, who, with her sister Jean, trudged miles around the campus lugging extra film packs, flash-bulbs (when we had them), photofloods, and arc lamps, only to have to stretch, stoop, bend, or crouch to get just the angle her merciless editor wanted.

The MONTAGE Staff got its wits together early in the year to present a beautiful and dignified Elite Night. With three independent soldiers as judges, the loveliest of the lovelies were finally selected, and the successful Elite candidates were announced to the celebrating student body in Tut Fun Room.

No write-up of the 1945 MONTAGE would be complete without a commendation of our beautiful blonde business manager, Sally Hodges, who intrigued businessmen from one end of Alabama to the other into investing in MONTAGE advertising.

Our staunchest outside aid to the 1945 MONTAGE came from four of the nicest men we know. Mr. E. H. Wills, the College business manager, helped us untangle a financial muddle at the beginning of the year and kept us on a level financial course during the rest of the year. Mr. Henri Gaspar, of Atlanta, left all of us gasping after his thirty-second poses, showed us how to combine much personality with quick photography for amazing results. Mr. Robert Faerber, of Alabama Engraving Company, juggled our ordinary pictures around to make our extraordinary layouts; and that prince among publishers, Mr. George Preiss, of The Paragon Press, helped us choose a cover in addition to having the final job of getting the MONTAGE out.

Throughout the year, the Biology Club has endeavored to fulfill its three-fold purpose of promoting interest and study in biological subjects, keeping informed on up-to-date research in the field, and carrying out projects of a practical and interesting nature.

As part of their program, the Biology Club aided in the entertainment of Dr. Butts, of the University of Chattanooga, during his stay on the campus.

CALKINS MUSIC CLUB

WE HAVE BEEN ACTIVE in doing our small part toward helping to win the war and to maintain the peace.

Some of us have given blood; some have done Red Cross sewing. Others have debated such questions as what to do with the conquered nations and the merit of compulsory arbitration in labor disputes.

Most of us have invested in War Stamps, read newspapers and heard radio newscasts and commentaries regularly, given clothes to the United Nations Clothing Drive, and studied maps with greater interest and concentration.

And all of us have given a good deal of serious thought to our own personal fitness and preparation for being the main part of the better world we have promised ourselves and those who will come after us.

ELITE NIGHT ★ ★

Forty beautiful students (chosen by members of each class) were then judged by three harassed judges, who, with a background of popular music to sooth their jangled nerves, came through with five beauties and eight favorites.

Sarah Suggs, left, furnished music . . . while judges Bradford Lang, Louis Wendel, and Bill King pondered over the selections.

College NIGHT . . . The

Top: The Purple Dramatization shows Jeanne d'Arc hearing heavenly voices . . . Bottom: About to be burned at the stake.

"Here come the Purples! Let 'em pass!"

The Purple side, traditionally, energetically, worked with its usual enthusiasm from the election of the twenty cabinet members until the final scrap of staging wire was removed from Palmer Hall.

Given a week, the cabinet dashed off two scripts and several songs, two of which were finally selected for presentation, all with a minimum of energy and sleep.

From then on the Purples "spent all their evenings in Reynolds and Palmer," active in song practices, pep meetings, and rehearsals. Never let it be insinuated that the least of College Night fun was listening to the casts tear into the scripts.

After the overworked stagers created five sets and practiced putting up and taking down the Purple flying and rolling stage equipment, this side came out with two knockdown presentations.

Left: The winning stunt dealt with idle gods inspired to lethargy by Pluto's imps . . . Right: Pluto himself was apprehended and sent back to the Underworld . . . Bacchus, after enjoying several nips from a little brown jug, needs the support he is getting from Sun-God Apollo.

PURPLES

Speak of the Devil, or Ye Gods demonstrated effectively the plight caused by the entrance of Pluto and five of his dainty imps, into the lives of the once-active but now lethargic Gods.

Jeanne D'Arc, given a new and excitingly realistic interpretation, was dramatized in four scenes. Great was the hysteria when a real and flaming torch was applied to the stake to which Jeanne was tied.

Using the talent of Purple music majors, the slow song was of the chorale type, with piano, organ and three hundred Purple voices.

The pep song, of the "corral" type, took up out west with poor cowboy Ned and his horse Joe.

After two years of losing, this year's Purples copped the judges' decision.

The Purples parade by day . . . and make swift set changes in their dramatization by night.

College Night . . . THE GOLDS

Gold leaders Rudy Renfro and Betty Dunn.

This stirring yell echoed throughout the four dormitories and half the student body began its four-week gauntlet of writing, casting, directing, composing, costuming, scenery building and rehearsing. College Night was in the offing and the Golds prepared for a glowing victory.

Gold writers sharpened their umpteen pencils, collected stacks of paper and settled down to the task of whipping up a drama and a stunt for their side. Having chosen their subjects they undertook the next job—casting. Any student having even the faintest hopes of wishes for stage career (and quite a few who had none) tried her hand and voice at reading a part of the scripts. At this point the staging and costuming crews took over. For days the carpenter shop reverberated with pounding hammers, sloshing paint brushes, and feminine noises. The costume committee dashed hither and yon and back again in search of enough material to cover the numerous anatomies which were now practicing the drama and stunt. Members of the property and lights committee lost their share of sleep and nerve control in trying to hold up against sudden changes in scripts, orders, ideas, and events. In the meantime the ever-faithful Gold members had practiced their slow and pep songs 'til every note and word were as well-known as the backs of their respective hands. (We hasten to add that several good voices were lost in the mad shuffle of pep meetings).

On the night of the great performance the curtains opened on the Gold Drama—an adaptation of Silence of the Sea, a product of outstanding French Underground prose author Vercors. The singing of the Gold slow song, "A Waltz," preceded the presentation of the pep song which was a boogie woogie version of a Chinese theme. The Gold stunt ("Relinquish That Domesticated Veterbrate; or, Lay That Chicken Down, Boy!,"—a take off on the well-known bit of American entertainment, the minstrel, brought to a close this year's College Night.

P. S. The Purps won!

The May Court, composed of Beauties and Honor Students from each class, watches the performance from the flag-bedecked platform.

★ MAY DAY ★ ★ ★

An impressive display of flags of the United Nations indicated the theme and announced the opening of the 1944 May Day celebration. Through the record crowd assembled on the lawn behind Calkins Hall, the procession, made up of the May Queen, Best Citizen, their escorts, the Honor Group, and the Beauties, made its way to the platform set up among the trees at the far side of the lawn.

Louise Lovelady, the May Queen, was crowned by Dr. Harman, who escorted her in, and Annie Lourie Boggs was presented the Best Citizen's cup by her escort, Dean Napier. A delightful addition to the traditional ceremony was the presentation of a bouquet by the May Queen to Mrs. Harman, as Lady of the Flowers.

The program presented for the May Court by the Dance Group and the Glee Club, with the assistance of the Montevallo High School Orchestra, consisted of traditional songs and dances representing various members of the United Nations and closed with a united rendition of the "Victory Polka."

Sponsored by Lambda Sigma Pi, the 1944 May Day may well be the last celebration of its kind on the Alabama College campus, since the 1945 observance of the day has been cancelled.

Ann Boyd, 1944 senior class president, hands a Webster's to Margaret Albritton, who, as Handy Henrietta, was the Class of 45's candidate for Governor . . . Unsmiling Seniors march past the "brass" band, made up of fugitives from Mr. Alenius' wind and string class.

CROOK

Accompanied by the martial strains of an accomplished band and the hurrahs of supporters of "Handy Henrietta" for Governor, Crook Week, 1944, was ushered in with startling ferocity. Once the bribes of cigarettes and chewing gum were exhausted, however, their most Sartorial Majesties grasped the sceptar of seniordam and ruled firmly over their lowly subjects.

Dubbed as "Foppesses," said lowly subjects struggled through three days at the unmerciful command of their superiors, wearing pinafores and coiffures, "side-swiped" rather than "upswept," and only incidentally searching for the Crook.

Highlights of the foppesses, short-lived career included roaring campaign speeches for Senator Lister Hill and Jim Simpson, breakfast in evening gowns, and a show of Alabama College thoroughbred canines.

Cause for rejoicing came, however, when Foppess Jennings, at twelve noon of the third day, extricated the Sacred Symbol from its hiding place on the power house roof. The Crook's discovery was DEAF-enitely announced by the laundry whistle, and all was over except the shouting and Crook Court.

Despite any seemingly unbearable hardships suffered at the hands of their Eminences, the Seniors, the Class of '45, would be the first to proclaim, "Long Live the Crook!"

College THE

On stage everybody! . . .

And everybody can be "on stage" or at least backstage by working with the College Theatre. There was a mad recruiting of all available talent for the production of each of the five plays which were viewed on Palmer stage.

Before the plays become finished productions, long, busy hours are spent in preparation by the members of the staging, lighting, costume, make-up, and properties committees—not to mention the hours of rehearsal by the actresses.

Whether it is an oversized arch or a small stool which the script calls for, it can be found in the maze of scenery at the Scene Shop. If the leading lady needs an Elizabethan gown, or a character needs a Chinese coolie's outfit, the College Theatre wardrobes will probably offer several different styles from which the Costume Chairman may choose.

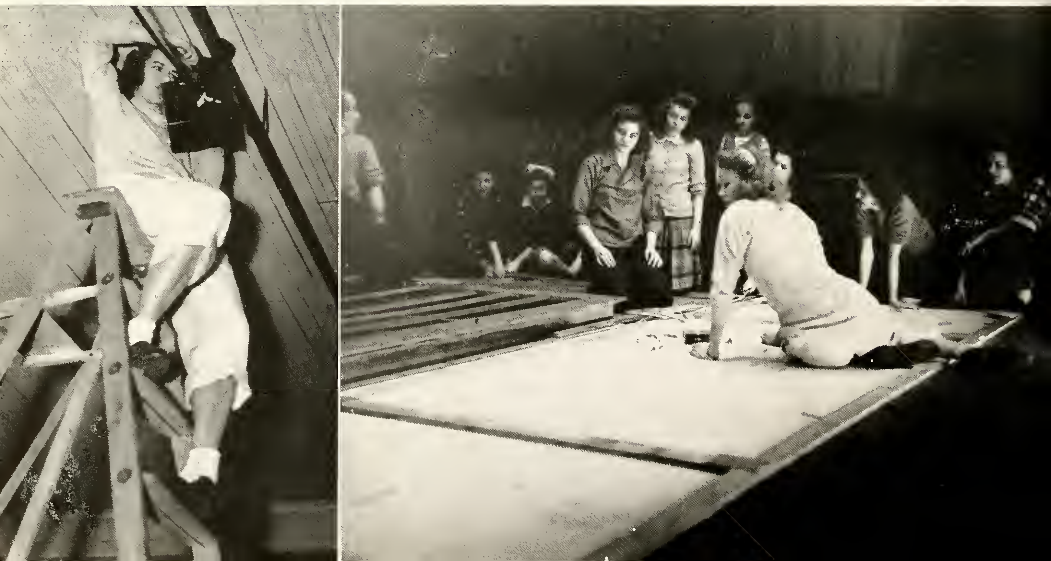
Carolyn Radgers adjusts a spot as part of a play's lighting plot . . . A staging crew contemplates the arrangement of flats and windows before putting up the set.



TRE

Assisting Dr. Trumbauer as a sort of advisory board, the Theotre Council is composed of those who have taken part in theatrical productions. From the members in the Theatre Council, the permanent chairmen of the various departments are chosen. It is their duty to see that the jobs are done.

Thus, after the last minute details are completed, the lines of the play at last learned, the last spot of paint thrown on the flats, the antique chair moved in, and the grease paint applied, the curtain opens on another College Theatre production.

WOM

September found the swimming pool still a refuge from the heat and, at the same time, a perfect place for a class in life saving which kept right on dragging in the drowning until the chill winds of October blew the door to the pool shut.

In the meantime things had been very definitely whiz-banging around down at the tennis courts, and the result was victory for Sally Hodges over Ruth Nichols in the singles. When the doubles came up, Sally and Dottie Johnson teamed against Cecile Aucoin and Eleanor Wilson for a hard fight, and a hard fight it was because the game hasn't ended 'til yet. They just proved to be too much competition for each other, and the last time we heard, things were still tit-for-tat, an eye for an eye and stuff.

ENS' SPORTS

Tenniquoits, as well as tennis had its participants as the Freshmen started the tenniquoit season with their inter-class games and were later joined by upperclassmen. Main and Hanson flung the tenniquoits thick and fast, competing for the Jug, and Main, with all its gleeful Freshmen, walked home with the cherished object. The season was brought to an exciting close the last of October as the first and second varsity team met, the score being 38 to 24 in favor of the first varsity team.

The volley ball was then substituted for the tenniquoit and things kept rocking along down on the ball courts. The culmination of the many games was the inter-dormitory volley ball tournament when Main was again victorious and acclaimed as winner of the Jug.

While some students had been busy with volleyball, others had found table-tennis to be an enjoyable pastime both on the loafing porch and at the Field House. So great was the interest that contests were held, and Martha Gordon, competing with Gila Belcher, proved to be the "champeen" in the singles with a score of 21-13, 21-17, while Mary Frances Burks and Frances Carr kept returning that ball 'til they were named winners of the doubles over Jean Jackson and Frances Burgin by a score of 16-21, 21-17, 21-19.

MORE ATHLETICS

During November and December the classes in soccer, plus the most energetic students at A. C., beat themselves out running the length of the soccer field making a noble effort to keep up with a speed demon ball. There were no inter-dormitory contests due to lack of participants, but, to put it mildly, "a good time was had by all."

Basketball was very much in the limelight during February as preparation for the basketball game between the Purples and Golds got under way, the final result being a breath-taking game and victory for the Purples by a score of 25 to 6.

With the coming warm weather the feather of the badminton shuttlecock began to fly in games between students and some members of the faculty. Said organization, in fact, produced the winners of the badminton doubles, Dr. McCall and Miss Finger, the score being 15-10, 15-9, while Gila Belcher, boosting the morale of the students, came in as winner of the singles by a score of 11-5, 11-0 over Jennie Graham.

The added sunshine of Spring meant added zeal for individual sports as golf, tennis, and archery came into their own once more. The "twang" of the archery bow served as a pleasing accompaniment for the noisy splashes and voices made by early swimmers.

Along with the swimmers and golfers came the members of the "Twilight League" who battled in and out every night after suuper getting ready for the inter-dormitory contest for the softball pennant.

OUR TREASURED LANDMARKS will Endure

Long after war has ceased they will stand as beacons to the American Way . . . to greater achievement in religion, arts, science, research, and industry. The way is not easy. It is narrow. It is sometimes rough. Other paths beckon alluringly, as seeming short cuts. But in mankind's halting progress through the ages many paths have been explored before. If now in uncertainty we change paths we will slow up progress and confuse those whose eyes are on us. By further smoothing of the proved paths we can continue to inspire earnest men everywhere to follow the way that already has led one nation so far toward the better and happier life for all.
